

A major change has occurred in my household within the last year. Being able to sit down to dinner with my family without being disturbed by telemarketers has been a blessing. I really believe that the restrictions placed on telemarketers has benefitted many persons like myself. It was a shame to have to take the phone off the hook in order to have some peace and quiet while dining or spending time with my family. I disliked knowing that I might miss some calls because I didn't want to listen to an annoying or persistent telemarketer try to sell me something I didn't want. I sincerely thank the Indiana lawmakers for their work in passing the no-call list.